the bestower of the new

Anne Arundel Hall

To the Graduates of 1962

Dr. May Russell

It is possible to be very learned, to know a great many facts, and not be wise. But we cannot become wise without learning. Each one of us has made a beginning in the acquisition of knowledge. As we continue to learn and use this knowledge in our daily lives, may we by character and intellect develop a little wisdom. For it is the trained, perceptive and understanding mind that is the secret weapon of the free world.
